I think about that: `$(window).scroll(function () { if ($('#footer').is(':visible')) { // something } });` But this is not valid. How can I check it correctly? A: You can use the `scrollTop()` method to get the height of the element and calculate it on each scroll. `function isVisible(element) { var windowHeight = $(window).height(); var elementHeight = element.offsetHeight; return (windowHeight + elementHeight) > window.scrollY; }` `$(window).scroll(function() { var el = document.getElementById("footer"); if (isVisible(el)) { console.log("footer visible"); } else { console.log("footer not visible"); }`
